

The Writers' Room

Information for Writers and Artists

The Writers' Room is a working and meeting space made available to Wild Pansy Press (WPP) by The Florence Trust (<http://www.theflorencetrust.com/>) It is part of their new studio space and gallery development in the former Holy Trinity Church building in Cloudesley Square, Islington.

The space is approximately 15m<sup>2</sup> with its own separate access via the church grounds. It is at present simply furnished with adaptable desking, shelves and lighting all of which can be removed and stored if necessary. There is a projector with a fixed mount, a sink and a small toilet/shower by the entrance (see plan and photos below). Users can work directly on the walls as long as all are repainted for the next user/s – we have huge vats of white emulsion easily to hand! The building has full WiFi coverage with a fast broadband connection.

Access for keyholders is 24/7 and includes access to the larger kitchen and meeting area in the main Florence Trust studios area accessed by the main building entrance. From April there will be public access to the grounds of the building Thursday to Sunday afternoons (TBC) and access by arrangement at other times (with a bell on the West gate of the building).

WPP invites proposals for short residencies of 4 to 6 weeks, working towards the production of an appropriate body of work in any medium but prioritising experiment, innovation and hybridity across the disciplines of writing and fine art. These will commence from the week beginning 1st April onwards.

It would help us if you could include a c.v. and a broad project outline suggesting 1) how you might use the space, 2) what kind of outcome/s might result and 3) how these might fit in with our aspirations for the site!
